

WHERE TO EAT IN OXFORD ?

In terms of eating, Oxford has a wide range of good restaurants and cafés within easy reach of the conference location. £15-£20 per day will easily cover the expenses of your lunch and dinner. However, we advise you to go to the following places in the City Centre:

- Oxford Castle (off New Road), Oxford Upbeat cafés and restaurants interwoven with castle and prison walls.
- Jericho & Little Clarendon Street (off Walton Street). Small cafés and restaurants with lots of character.
- Cowley Road – just beyond Magdalen Bridge. Superb Indian & Oriental food and other exotic cuisines from Latin America and Africa.
- Covered Market (off Cornmarket Street– entrance from the Golden Cross). It is the most famous covered market in Oxford, and there are over 50 shops, cafés and restaurants, all under one roof.

 We advise for Chinese food the

Dancing Dragon restaurant

283 Banbury Road

(After the Summertown shopping Centre)

It is an open buffet with an excellent range of different Chinese dishes,

(Eat as much as you can for £11:50)

 We advise for European vegetarian food the

Nosebag restaurant

6, St. Michael Street

(off Cornmarket Street)

(City Centre, opposite the Oxford Union)

It offers a good range of European meals,
and there is also in the ground floor a nice and cheap

Malaysian restaurant

 We advise for Lebanese & Middle Eastern food :

Alshami Lebanese Restaurant

25 Walton Crescent

(off Richmond Road, opposite the Synagogue)

(City Centre – Jericho area)

If you wish to get a glimpse of the Oxford landscape, please go to the

Trout Inn restaurant & pub

195 Godstow Road

Wolvercote

(Take a bus from the City centre - opposite the Randolph Hotel - to Wolvercote village)

It is an ideal place to enjoy your meal in a green area near the Thames River.
